

100 Years of the King's Badge

EDITOR'S NOTE

This is a special edition of the Sheet Anchor, the journal of the Royal Marines Historical Society (RMHS), to honour and commemorate 100 years of the award of the King's Badge to the most outstanding recruit in the King's Squad, the senior recruit squad passing for duty on completion of training. This booklet, published by the RMHS in collaboration with the Royal Marines Charity, has been compiled and written by Major Rick Hall RM, who has researched the records of all those recruits to receive this most prestigious award since King George V bestowed this honour on the Corps following a visit to the RM Depot at Deal in March 1918.

The King's Badge is worn in all orders of dress.

100 Years of the King's Badge

By Major Rick Hall Royal Marines

FOREWORD

By

Major General Charlie Stickland OBE
Commandant General Royal Marines

The King's Badge is the visible mark of a man who is first amongst equals. The man who wears this badge exemplifies the Commando Spirit. It is not awarded lightly and the recipient can feel justly proud that he will wear his badge throughout his career. Much will be expected of him; he carries the weight of expectation experienced by all who have been awarded the King's Badge.

From its inception in 1918 as the award to the best recruit in the senior recruit squad, the King's Squad, to the present day, King's Badgemen have justified the confidence shown in their personal and professional qualities. They are expected to lead through example and measure themselves against the Corps' enduring demand for excellence. This very well researched record of the history of the King's Badge by Major Rick Hall Royal Marines is a welcome addition to the annals of our history. Within you will find accounts of careers of King's Badgemen that, without exception, demonstrate the qualities that first won them the award and which shine through in the accounts of their exploits. I commend it to you.

PREFACE

This booklet started as a personal project back in 2012. At that time I collected RM medals and had purchased a group to Major Victor Deane (50 Squad) which came with his Blues Uniform¹. The fact that his tunic sported a King's Badge came as a surprise and a bonus and started me thinking about the award's history, how the recipients had fared in their careers and so on. I started dabbling in some research, then became involved in the sorely needed renovation of the King's Badge Boards in the Drill Shed at CTCRM. In that endeavour it soon became clear that there was no single, accurate record of King's Badgemen. There were three primary sources of information: the Drill Shed Board; a database kept by the Corps Historian; and the Globe and Laurel magazine. None of those sources were complete and in many cases, they varied, with surnames and initials differing as the result, presumably, of simple clerical errors, squads/troops omitted or in the wrong order, and even winners recorded when there wasn't one to record. This trend had worsened, rather than improved with the advent of the Joint Personnel Administration system (JPA) and now the only official record of King's Badgemen is internal to Commando Training Wing; again, not without omissions or errors, and not on JPA.

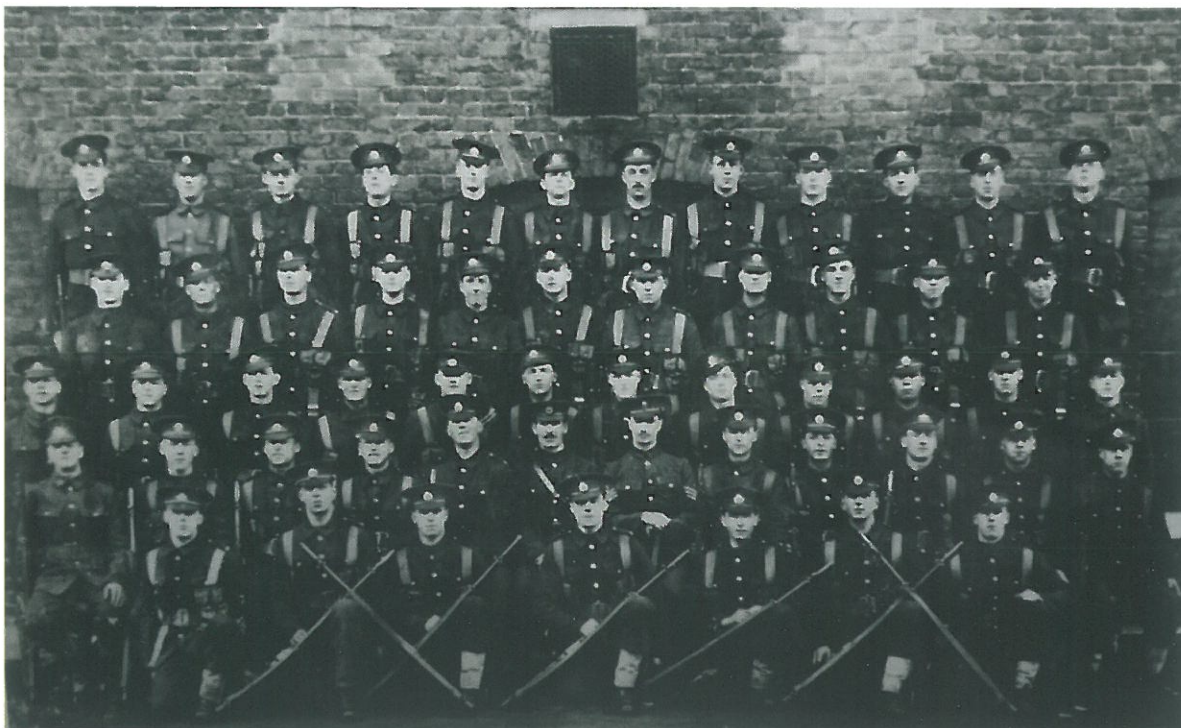

Driven by the need to sort that out but more pressingly by the thought, "I wonder if they all lived up to their early promise?" I set my mind to compiling an accurate database and to researching the winners. In reading that list I soon figured out that I knew, or at least had met, nearly 100 of them, starting with Uncle Eric (472 Squad) who took one of my Recruit Troops for Heavy Weapons acquaints in the early 1980s, right up to 2Lt Tom Westbury, who joined in 2014 and at the time of writing is in YO 2017. That made it personal and more enjoyable. I had also had the privilege of sitting on the King's Badge Board when I was SO2 Command Training at Lympstone in 2002/3, so my connection to and qualifications for the task seemed reasonable.

I don't for one minute claim that the spreadsheet I have compiled is 100% accurate, but for the fact that it is anywhere near that figure, thanks are due to a number of people. The most effusive praise must go to Derek Oakley, whose painstaking index of the Globe and Laurel's contents between 1892 and 1986 has been invaluable, and even now the whole series is available digitally. George Gelder and his predecessor as the RM Historian, Mark Bentinck, were most helpful; George was able to source service records and recommendations for honours and awards and even made the coffee during visits to the Naval Historical Branch! Alison Firth of the RM Museum was similarly helpful in allowing me access to their huge archive of images. Indeed, nearly all the photos, except where annotated, are from the RM Museum or from the pages of the Globe and Laurel magazine. I am deeply indebted to Brian Carter, John Gilbert and the Royal Marines Historical Society (RMHS) for their generosity in agreeing to publish this anthology as an edition of their regular publication, "The Sheet Anchor". The primary contributors to this have, of course, been the King's Badgemen themselves, and several others who responded to my appeals in recent Globe and Laurels and on the RMA website, for dits and memories.

INTRODUCTION

On 7 March 1918 King George V visited the Royal Marines Depot at Deal. Whilst there he met the 4th Battalion, who covered themselves in glory the following month at Zeebrugge, but it was his proclamation and lasting legacy as Colonel-in-Chief of RM Forces (a title now known as the Captain General) with which this book is concerned. His direction that the senior recruit squad should be named "The King's Squad" and the ensuing institution of the King's Badge for the best all-round recruit in that squad (who came up to the right standard) was swiftly implemented. At the time the senior squad was No 5 (shown below).

The service record of the first recipient, Pte Ernest Shiner (shown right), has the entry, "Awarded...KB", dated as 7 March 1918. Official Corps records were a little slower in catching up but there is little doubt that the badges, consisting of the King's Cypher surrounded by laurels would have been very quickly manufactured and issued by a country on a war footing and at the very height of its imperial powers.

The war dragged on in some areas into 1919, notably involving the Corps in Russia, so recruiting remained strong. Forty-two King's Badgemen were created before 1920, of which nearly 40% were former buglers who had served for most of the war years; two of those men were at Zeebrugge and took part in the famous VC ballot. Ten were commissioned, the first of these being Albert Westcott, who had briefly met King George V when he presented him with the PT Medal during training, then was wounded in action at Zeebrugge. Drill displays by King's Squads at Olympia for what were early Royal Tournaments in 1919 and 1920 brought them into the public eye; letters and articles published in the Globe & Laurel at the time are glowing in praise for their skill and precision.

By 1922 the Corps had been reduced from a wartime high of 55,000 to 9,500 men and the 1920s produced only 77 new King's Badgemen. Then, as recruiting rose to meet the new threat the next two decades created 123 and 124 respectively, and the wartime experiences of this generation contribute to some of the most exciting and interesting career histories.

The Prince of Wales presenting the King's Badge to Mne Payton in 1935

Not all King's Badgemen remained shining beacons of military virtue and bearing. Up to 1960, two deserted and another ten forfeited their badges for disciplinary reasons, but the vast majority turned into role models and rose steadily through the ranks, many earning awards for gallantry or great deeds. This trend continued into modern times and one only has to consider the esteem in which some of the current holders are held to be reassured that the selection process for King's Badgemen works well.

This booklet aims to illustrate the history of the King's Badge in its Centenary year by highlighting the careers of some of its winners. It will be a chronological record of some of the most remarkable men who have served in the Royal Marines since 1918. Amongst them are Commando COs, RSMs, a General, SBS legends and heroes whose wartime and whole range of honours and awards that can

Men like Jim Fallace, Bob Sankey, Derek Pounds and Eric Blyth were from all walks of life, but whilst their lives were shaped by the Corps, it is also true to say that, through their leadership and example, they helped to shape the Corps we know today. It was not until 1935 that the King's Badge was personally presented by Royalty, when Marine Payton of 212 Squad received it from The Prince of Wales, the future King Edward VIII, but the only time in its first hundred years that the badge has been awarded by the reigning monarch was when Marine Woods of 353 Squad received his from King George VI in 1939.
